THE BENEFITS OF ADVERTISING.

We learn that Dr. S. P. Townsend has sold out the good will of his Sarsaparilla business, including machinery and raw material on hand, for the large sum of $100,000.—

This is an illustration of the advantages and benefits of advertising. The purchasers are Messrs. Nostrand & Bach, both wealthy and well known individuals. They have, we understand, employed the celebrated Chemist, Dr. James R. Chilton, who will hereafter have the compounding department under his own immediate supervision. They are men of enterprise, and will, no doubt, sustain the character of this celebrated medicine, which has the reputation of being the best preparation of Sarsaparilla made in the United States. The new proprietors, we understand, warrant their article to stand in all climates any length of time, which we have no doubt of, when manufactured by so practical a chemist as Professor Chilton, who is well known to be one of the first chemists in this country. THE BENEFITS OF ADVERTISING.

The public are hereby notified that the preparation extensively known as Dr. S. P. Townsenn's Compound Extract of Sarsaparilla, is now manufactured under my direction and supervision, from the original recipe obtained from Dr. S. P. Townsend, and I certify that it is composed of ingredients purely vegetable, and without Mercury—and also that the ingredients are judiciously compounded, so as to obtain from them their greatest medicinal effects.

A New York correspondent of the Baltimore Sun of the 17th, so accurately states our views of New York politics, and the chances of parties there, that we feel almost inclined to steal his remarks and adopt them as our own. The correspondent says that act of folly generally termed "crowing before you "so far as the Whigs are concerned, Mr. WEBSTER is the favorite in this city, [New York.] but it is idle to say that the State is not under the dominion of SEWARD. Now, how is Mr. Corwin susained by the facts? Why, instead of there being only a small sum in the treasury on the first of July next, there will be a surplus of probably seven millions, as the receipts to the present time have exceeded his estimates six millions of dollars, and the pro-affairs of the government are managed at Washington, and of the credit which treasury estimates are entitled to. It shows a great want of intelligence on the subject, but any quantity of ignorance in refer-We remember passing through Cheraw in the be- ence to the progress of the country. The fact is, our practical business men in New York, know mor about this and kindred matters, than the whole cabinet combined. The progress which this republic has made in prosperity during the last twenty years, has been wonderfully great. Twenty years ago the revenue for this year will exceed fifty millions. Mr Corwin might have saved himself the trouble of unde-estimating the revenue, with the view of affecting the tariff question, for the whole subject of protective tariff has been dead and buried for many years. The commercial and manufacturing progress of country requires no high tariffs or special legislation. They have proved most conclusively that they are capable of taking care of themselves, without any rovernment assistance.

The truth is, we are inclined to believe that all the ex-Senators and ex-members of Congress who became members of cabinets, as shown by their own friends have been so much engaged as counsel and agents for claimants, for some years past, and have een so much occupied in drawing money from the treasury, by getting them liquidated, that they have forgotten the little they ever knew on other subjects and are unfit for the responsible duties of cabinet ministers. lins' reply, we take the following, as the gist of his reason

'Your policy would free those who are unfit to be free; it would render discontented the slaves they left behind; it would organise companies of freed slaves to conspire for the freedom of others; it would encourage abolition societies, free soil parties and associations for the protection and defence of fugitive and the protection and defence of fugitive and the protection and defence of slaves. tives. It would render the institution of slavery among us less stable and less beneficent. The manner of freeing slaves at the south is better for the owner and better for the slave himself. For the owner, who by giving liberty to a faithful servant meourages others to the same obedience and the ame boon. For the slave, by keeping him here anong his friends and relatives instead of casting him upon the tender mercies of strangers and fanat

A good slave can acquire his freedom without becoming a fugitive, a firebrand among free soilers. t appears to me, therefore, that it is the policy of the slaveholders not to accept a pecuniary equiva-lent for his fugitive slave from citizens of the north in the manner proposed; that it is not proper or ju-dicious for me, the first public claimant of a fugitive slave before the people of Massachusetts, to receive indemnity, for his or her loss, by a community who prevented a recovery by law. From the hones biding citizens of Boston, I can accept no indemnity by subscription, since they have done me no wrong ty by subscription, since they have done in a wind; From those whose 'consciences are higher than the U. S. Constitution,' and who violated law in preventing the slaves arrest, I look for indemnity to the Boston courts of justice. These men have drawn odium on your city, injured your commerce and insulted the character of your people. They should pay the penalty! Beyond all this, the south waits to see bether the north 'will deliver up on demand' those fugitives who were 'held to service' here; waits with solicitude to learn whether the constitution and laws of congress will be recognized as the 'supreme law of the land; waits with anxiety to know whether the social, civil, and religious bonds of union between the north and south are to be as 'hooks of steel, or ropes of sand;' waits, waits with intent interest to know whether a southern man, before a judicial tribunal of the north, to reclaim his slave property. is considered 'a dogged Jew' refusing 'ducats'

Message of Gov. Young, of Deseret. We have before us a copy of Gov. Young's first annual message to the Legislature of Deseret, delivered on the 2d of last December, which gives a highly favorable and interesting picture of the condition of affairs in that new territory. In commencing, he announces that the former government of Deseret will continue, in all its departments, until such time as it shall be superseded by an organization contemplated under the act of Congress, establishing a territorial government. Referring to the past he says: "We have the proud satisfaction of having sustained a quiet, yet energetic government, under all the vicissitudes incident to new and untried localities; and when the general government shall have assumed to pay the expenditure, con-sequent upon the Indian expeditions, of being comparatively free from debt. Unlike the golden-browed neighbors of our sister State, no agent of ours is hawking about our State bonds, to obtain the necessary means to defray the sixteen dollars per diem of the allowance of the members of the Le-gislature."

The cause of education is flourishing throughout the territory. With the main body of the Indian tribes the most peaceful relations exist, and great efforts have been made to introduce among them the habits and customs of civilized life, but with only partial success.

The message states as an instance unparalleled in the history of the times. that not a single solitary case was reported for trial before the regular ses sions of either county or supreme court during the past year; and no offence beyond the control of the justices of the peace seems to have been committed. Gov. Young recommends in the strongest terms that the capitalists of the State should introduce machinery for the manufacturing of all kinds of ma-that territory. The Governor states that a railroad will most probably be constructed to Iron county, as also contin ously to Southern California, terminating at San Diego, and that whatever aid the Legislature should see fit to extend to it he shall acquiesce in, if within the range of his constitutional duties.

thanks to the obscurity of a moonless night, we cannot a halt under some large trees, at some distance from the building, and I rode forward from my troop in order to reconnoitre the place. The hacienda, so far as I could see in gliding across the trees, formed a huge massive parallelogram, strengthened by enormous buttresses of hewn stone. Along this chasm, the buttresses of hewn stone. Along this chasm, the buttresses of hewn stone. Along this chasm, the buttresses of hewn stone along the hacienda almost formed the continuation buttresses, and in the hacienda almost formed the continuation of the base and if about to roll to the bottom of the abyss, and I gave to my body a violent impulse on the side next the hacienda, the surface of which offered not a single projection, not a single turf of weeds to check my descent. This sudden horse, was the salvation of my life. He had sprung horse, was the salvation of my life. He had sprung at the ages of 71 and 72 years, have sprung, besides the herself in the rocks, to the bottom of which the eve could not penetrate, for the mists which incessantly boiled up from below did not allow it to measure their awful depths. This place was known in the country by the name of "the Voladero."

I had explored all sides of the building except this, when I know not what scruple of military honthe walls and the precipice there was a narrow path way about six feet wide; by day, the passage would not have been dangerous, but by night it was a perness, only two paces from the edge of a perpendicuar chasm, was no very easy task even for as practised a horseman as myself. Nevertheless, I did not hesitate, but boldly urged my horse between the walls of the farm-house and the abyes of the Voladero. I had got over half the distance without acing myself—which was even less dangerous than encountering a horseman in front of me on such a road. "There is a christian passing along the ravine! Keep back."

I he horse trembled, but I calmed him with my voice. When I felt his very life, so to speak, palpitate in his brain beneath my fingers, I leaned over towards who has that valuable and almost indispensable animal, the horse, in his charge. h this town, on Saturday morning last, after a painful illuss of more than three weeks, Daniel B. Baker McAus-Lay, son of John McAuslan, Esq., aged three years. When we see the old man in his weakness gathered to the grave, it seems to us but an ordination of nature, and we wooder not that it is so. But when we behold the child as he sports amid the flowers which bloom along the margin of the stream of life, stricken by disease, and cradled in the embrace of death; it staggers our short sighted reason and we are startled at the fearful mysteries of life and death— Even the man of the world stops in his eager pursuit of pleasure, or of business, and is forced for a moment at least, to remember how frail and brittle is the thread that holds him to this world.

But in these fearful dispensations of Providence, it is not for the dead but for the living, that we must weep, it is heart broken parents upon whom the blow falls with a cruel and a crushing weight, who bespeak our sympathies and our tears.

But for the child, short has been the period of sickness and of suffering allotted to him here, he has borne for a little while "the image of the earthy that he might bear forever the image of the heavenly." The angel of death has taken by the hand and has gently led him from the scene of suffering and sorrow, to his home in Heaven. "It is well with the child. It is well."—Com.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING JUNE 19, 1851 Another week of the dull season has passed away, and we have but little animation to report in the commercial department of our paper, except so far as regards the naval store market. Since our last, we have had several days of rainy weather accompanied with unusually cool nights. We learn from Fayetteville under date of yesterday, that the Cape Fear had rose some four feet since the recent rains, but was then down to 3 feet in the shoalest places. We hear of roduce on the way to market. Below will be found such remarks as we think we are justified in making. BEEF CATTLE-The market is badly supplied. We con-

LIME—None received since last report.

LUMBER—We hear of no sales. Some two or three rafts on market.

MOLASSES—There is none in first hands. Two eargoes daily expected.

NAVAL STORES—Since our last report, about 1600 a 1700 barrels of crude Turpentine has reached market, and been taken by shippers and distillers at our last week's figures; closing to-day with sales of about 250 barrels, all on the market, at our highest figure for 280 lbs. From the Pennsylvanian. The Providence Post thus pithily shows the difference between the Democratic and the Whig parties in this State: In 1847, the Pennsylvania Legislature passed a law denying the use of the jails of that State for the detention of the fugitive slaves while awaiting their trials. At the last session of the Legislature, a bill to repeal this law was passed by both Houses, but Governor Johnston refused to sign it, and it was thus lost. At the late Democratic State Convention, the subject was under consideration, and the following

Our friend Solon Robinson, seems to think that we committed a great error in the suggestions made on the use of guam; and if such be the fact, it be-comes us to retract what we said amiss, and stand comes us to retract what we said amiss, and stand corrected. We remember using testing the solubil-ity, and analyzing this imported manure, long be-fore our friend Solon was an agent for its sale, and when he was tilling the rich soil of Indiana, where nature has furnished so much guano in the "fat of the land," that men threw it away.

When one drills in 200 lbs. of this fertilizer with a view to feed an acre of corn or cotton plants, how much of the manure is immediately soluble in water, or in the moisture of damp earth, which surrounds it? Can friend Robinson answer this question? If it? Can triend Robinson answer this question? If so, then we desire to learn what part of the manure dissolved in water and immediately diffused through the soil, is really caustic and fatal to the germs of cotton seeds, provided it reaches them in a concentrated condition? The "fire" in guano is uric acid and ures, which yield the much talked of ammonia, when decomposed. These caustic elements rarely amount to 15 per cent. of the mass, and only a part of that which is present, is immediately soluble.— The 200 pounds applied to an acre cannot yield over 20, or 10 per cent of really caustic acids or alkalies. Suppose these 20 pounds were pure ammonia, uric acid, or even the oil vitriol; how much moisture a whole acre, so to dilute this aight or acid, that it could do no possible injury? Distributed broadcast, this small quantity of dissolved manure could not produce any great effect. Hence the propriety of placing it near the growing plants. But how near? Obviously so near as practicable, and not injure them in the first instance, before the caustic elements are diffused in the earth. There are some 4725 square yards in an acre, and if we allow three plants to a ward then there will be 14,175 growing on an acre, between which 20 pounds of uric acid, or urate of ammonia, are to be divided. If we place the fourteen thousandth part of 20 pounds of soluble manure within an inch of the seed or root of a plant, it must be equally diffused and diluted through six if not sight only is proposed from the second of the second o eight cubic inches of moist soil, before it reaches it. square one inch deep, which has its four sides an nch from a common centre, contains four cubic inches: but the manure will penetrate the earth below as well as above, so that eight cubic inches will be within an inch of the fertilizer. This quantity of earth is several hundred times heavier than the soluble guano applied to it. Experience of many years in England, France and this country, has fully confirmed the soundness of the above remarks on this subject, Mr. Solon Robinson to the contrary not-retical writers may reasonably differ in opinion. On light, open, sandy soils, manure of any kind can hardly be buried too deeply by ordinary tillage. On "O, you l hardly be buried too deeply by ordinary tillage. On a general rule, we would never bury manure below the middle of the earth plowed. In this position it the middle of the earth plowed. In this position it reader will see, is only one part of ammonia in a thousand of soil. Mr. Thompson, and Prof. Way, Chemists to the Royal Agricultural Society, England, have brought out some interesting facts show ing the power of aluminous earths to decompose both the volatile and fixed salts of ammonia, and retain their alkaline base as the indispensable food of plants. Direct, careful and satisfactory experiments have demonstrated that a soil (which always contains more or less alumina or clay) has a peculiar and controlling affinity for ammonia, so that it does not readily escape by volatilization, or the washing of heavy rains, when combined with earth. All liquid manures, so extensively used in the old world as top dressing, are, substantially, dissolved guano. The mechanical part of farming needs reform quite as much as the theoretical; but while so many are striving to got to the root of the matter in plowing, care should be taken not to extract from the soil vastly more of the elements of fertility than is replaced therein. If your correspondents will try the following simple plan, I will warrant them that every beetle and cockroach will shortly disappear, and that the kitchen will not again be infested. Add about a teaen will not again be infested. Add about a teaspoonful of powdered arsenic to about a tablespoonful of mashed boiled potatoes; rub and mix them well together, and then crumble about a third of it, every night at bedtime, about the kitchen hearth; it will be eaten up, or nearly so, by the following morning. The creature is very fond of potatoes, and devours them greedily, crawls again into its hole and perishes. I had occasion to have some alterations made in the kitchen stove six months after I pursued this plan, and found hundreds of wings and dried mummies of defunct cockroaches. Their disappearance was not attended with the slighest perappearance was not attended with the slighest per ceptible smell; and though five years have elapsed ceptible smell; and though hve years have empoce, not one has again been seen in my kitchen. In putting it into practice, any remaining crumbs should be swept up the next morning.

O'BRIEN AND MEAGUER.—A letter from Van Dieman's Land states that Smith O'Brien has become tutor to a gentleman's family in the colony, and that Mr. Meagher is about to vary the monotony of "convict life" by taking unto almself a wife, in the shape of Miss Bennett, a farmer's daughter.

SINGULAR SUICIDE. - A singular suicide occurred in order to learn their true value. The agriculturist is should have a correct idea of the necessity of helping the land which is to help him. Among the millions of farmers in this extended republic, how many are willing to help the land as much as the land helps them? We fear not one in a thousand. Nine plantations in ten lack lime; while not one planter plantations in ten lack lime; while not one planter are should develop the lack lime; while not one planter are should develop the lack lime; while not one planter are should develop the lack lime; while not one planter are should be a of the peace, and in good circumstances, killed himself by a shot through the head with a rifle. He had dressed himself with more than usual care, and after playing a game of billiards, asked what time it was, when his friend informed him that it was 10 o'clock. He then said that if that were the case he would be in a hurry, for he expected to die at 11—go out of the world with railroad speed. He went to his office, and was engaged in triuming some bullets, when a young man inquired what use he intended to make of them, to which he replied, "I am going to shoot a fool—a d—d fool," and left the

The cause of the rash act is attributed to the fact that its victim was devotedly attached to a young lady, afflicted with a more but not the less certain destroyer, and whose case he knew was hopeless. But a few minutes after the commission of the fatal act, a telegraphic despatch came announcing that she was expected to survive but a short time.

MR. PAXTON .- A late English on dit is, that "Mr. Paxton, the architect of the glass palace, is to be knighted." On reading which, "Jeems" of the Boston Post, perpetrates the following impromptu:

Strange that the man whose wondrous panes
That magic palace lighted,
Should find the richest of his gains
To be himself be-knighted!
